NRA RECOGNISES TOP EMPLOYEES

NEWS DESCRIPTION

GRAND CAYMAN, Cayman Islands - Phillip Berry has been named the National Road's Authority Employee of the Year 2018 and Kelcy Jackson has received the Achievement Award.

They were both honoured on Friday, 7 December during the annual Christmas Party and Employee of the Year Ceremony. Acting Managing Director Edward Howard presented them with their awards.

The NRA recognises its outstanding employees for their efforts and impacts in increasing the overall professionalism and core values of the organisation.

"We take this one night to look back and honour the special events and people who help make the National Road's Authority the great place that it is," said Shena Ebanks, NRA's Chief Human Resources Officer. "We are proud of the dedicated and professional team that works very hard each and every day. These employees are high performers and worthy of recognition. We also recognise those who were nominated but not successful this year."

Each month nominations are open for an employee of the Month and those selected are highlighted and rewarded for their achievements. Employee of the Year for NRA is determined through a nomination panel. The Panel puts forward the two individuals who scored the highest overall monthly scores throughout 2018. Mr. Berry and Ms Jackson tied with 364 points each, so the panel had to consider which employee had won employee of the month more than once in the year. Mr. Berry was the winner, having been named Employee of the Month for March and September. Mr. Jackson received the Achievement Award to recognize his effort.
